Leonard native Victor Correa is interning at Studio One, an award-winning television show produced at the University of North Dakota. Correa is the associate producer with the project. He is responsible for developing guest ideas for the show, researching various topics, pre-interviewing potential guests and writing guest memos. He also assists the producer in managing the timing of the show.

"(Studio One) gives me the experience to take to jobs in the same field," Correa says.

This semester, he helped produce a guest segment highlighting the rare Air Force, "Portraits of Courage" award. His interviewee was just one of 18 recipients in the history of the Air Force to receive this honor: <http://bit.ly/HMci3A>.
